Some current issues in second/foreign language

Is there a gift/special talent for language acquisition? Is “immersion” best? Should we force students to speak more? What about writing? And, what about accent?

Workshop

Story Listening (SL) and Guided Self-Selected Reading (GSSR)

The Story Listening/Guided Self-Selected Reading promises to be a complete program for EFL/ESL students. The goal is to bring EFL students from the beginner (eg. TOEIC 250) to the high intermediate level (eg TOEIC 650 to 800) in three to four years. The method, we have found, is more effective, enjoyable and cost-efficient for students, and far more pleasant for teachers. Both components provide optimal input for language acquisition.
